The saxophone chamber music program at the University of Florida provides the student with the opportunity to work with a small number of other musicians to create art in a chamber music setting. The course includes the following components:

Rehearsals with Dr. Helton, or with a Graduate Assistant, will take place weekly. Instruction will focus on techniques that will enable the ensemble to progress most efficiently. Particular emphasis will be placed on musical aspects of chamber performance: shaping lines, intonation, musical communication and ensemble performance.

Public performance is required on the saxophone ensembles concert during the final weeks of the semester. Other public performances may also be scheduled (convocations, studio classes, conferences, festivals, etc.). Performance experience is essential to the development of a performing chamber ensemble.
