“Artists are the gate keepers of truth. We are civilization’s radical voice.”
- Paul Robeson

Course Description

This course will engage students in focused professional-level practice using creative and/or art-based strategies for utility in public health. The student will undertake 48 hours of work in an approved practicum setting over 8 of the 16 weeks of the semester, including project planning, implementation, and evaluation. Literature review, field research, reflection periods, regular meetings with an approved on-site supervisor and the course instructor, and a culminating assignment will deepen the student’s understanding of professional-level arts and culture practice in public health.

Objectives

1. Develop and strengthen professional-level practical skills utilizing arts and culture for public health in community spaces.
2. Gain experience in and develop understanding of organizational structures that support the use of the arts and culture in a public health context.
3. Develop abilities to effectively engage in partnerships between public health entities, community organizations and professional creatives.
4. Nurture an advanced level of understanding how arts and culture in public health is practiced.
5. Be empowered to design and cultivate significant approaches to facilitating arts and culture in a public health context.
Course Format & Content

The course is presented in an asynchronous online format and details are subject to change as deemed necessary. The general scope and content are:

- Approval of the written practicum plan by site supervisor and instructor.
- Completion of all orientation and training as required by the practicum site.
- Completion of a minimum of 48 hours of work supervised by an approved supervisor; hours must be undertaken at a pace of 6 hours per week over eight weeks, approximately 75% practice and 25% administration and research. This usually begins around Week Six but may be modified according to individual needs.
- Keep an online reflection journal that critically explores your on-site work.
- Meet with both the course instructor and site lead at least 3 times during the semester; meetings may take place in person, via phone or video conference, and should be summarized via brief synopses.
- Submit a final assignment that best presents the context of the practicum as well as critically examining your participation in the practicum experience, and the practicum itself.

Required Materials

All required materials will be available on the Canvas platform. Learning is optimized when students explore the materials and apply germane insight towards discussions and reflections.

Assignments

- Due on Sundays by 11:59pm EST, unless otherwise notified, and following APA citation guidelines if necessary.
- There are no expected word counts or video lengths, and all assignments should apply the principle of “thorough and concise.”
Practicum Plan

Practicum plans should include: a brief description of the practicum site, the work that you will be doing, and the collaborations that will support this work. The plan should also identify the key public health challenges that the practicum aims to address, and relevant supporting literature. In the plan, start and end dates of the practicum should be determined, and at least a tentative plan for regular correspondence with the site lead. This can include pre-determined meetings as shown on the course calendar.

Reflection Journals

Students will keep a weekly online journal throughout this course. On alternating weeks between Week 3 and Week 13, students will reflect on experiences related to the preparation and execution of their practicum. It is encouraged to utilize course materials and discussion board conversations to elucidate insights in the reflection journals, if applicable. Entries can be presented in the manner most comfortable for the student (including but not limited to written or video entries).

Discussion Board

The weekly discussion board will pose a question based on the related materials. Students should provide insight reflective of their practicum experiences and are encouraged to include references to relevant literature or evidence acquired during their work.

Final Assignment

Students are encouraged to present the final assignment in a manner reflective of their practicum experience, such as the creative expression(s) utilized during their work. Regardless, students must include a written synopsis of the practicum process and outcome(s), including:

- Theoretical/conceptual background
- Aims and goals
- Existing evidence of practice (if applicable)
- Methodology
- Field observations
- Strengths and limitations
- Future direction
- Personal and professional reflections

Students should consider their reflection journals as the foundation of their final assignment and are welcome to draw from course materials if complementary. Instructor meetings are opportunities to present questions and discuss approaches to the final assignment.
Literature Reflection (optional)

Students can earn additional credit by providing a reflection one of the literature materials presented during the course. The reflection should be a critical analysis of both the creative practice studied in the article as well as the research itself. Students are encouraged to illustrate juxtapositions between the selected literature and their practicum experience, including any significant theoretical, conceptual or methodological similarities or differences. The reflection must be presented in written format.

Meetings

Course Instructor & Site Lead Meetings

Students are to attend at least three (3) meetings with the course instructor and practicum site lead during the semester and are welcome to request additional meetings with the instructor as needed. Grading is based on participation in course instructor meetings and brief synopses of site lead meetings. Students are encouraged to be proactive in scheduling meetings in a timely manner, and are best served when prepared to bring forth a substantive discussion during each meeting.
