Course Description: How does music elicit strong emotional reactions? Why do we enjoy repeated exposure to the same, familiar piece? What psychological and physiological faculties are involved in our apprehension, appreciation, and engagement with music? What are the implications of research in psychology and physiology for composers, performers, scholars, and educators?
David Huron addresses these questions and more in his groundbreaking text Sweet Anticipation (2007). Using his book and related articles, we will explore theories of psychological expectation and what they can contribute to our understanding of how music triggers emotional responses. Pieces from a wide variety of styles will be examined in light of Huron’s notions, and students will engage in a research project informed by his ideas and analytical techniques.

Course Requirements and Procedures:
Students will complete all assigned readings, and research projects on time. Active participation in weekly discussions is expected, and participants will pursue independent research in addition to the assigned readings. On occasion, participants may be assigned articles to read and summarize for the rest of the class, and to lead discussions surrounding various topics. Assignments, readings, due dates, and grades will be posted on Canvas, UF’s elearning platform: http://elearning.ufl.edu/.

Attendance: Attendance in the synchronous class meetings is required. Unexcused absences will result in the lowering of course grade by one increment for each additional absence. Excused absences are consistent with university policies in the undergraduate catalog: https://catalog.ufl.edu/UGRD/academic-regulations/attendance-policies/

Required Text:
Weekly Discussion Questions and Class Participation: All students are expected to come to class having read the materials for the week, highlighting at least three passages from the readings that catch their interest in some way. These can be passages that you strongly agree or disagree with, passages about which you feel you can provide some additional insight or which you don’t understand, ideas that you would like to explore further, a statistic or fact that you find illuminating or counterintuitive, or anything that changes the way you think about some component of the experience of music. The instructor will call on participants during our weekly discussion sections to initiate a portion of the discussion using these highlighted passages. Each week, the instructor will evaluate your preparedness and contributions to the examination of the material and assign a participation grade.

Research Paper and Presentation: All participants will write a research paper, approximately 10-15 pages in length, inspired by the topics and research methods encountered in the weekly readings. A research proposal is due on 2/11, with a bibliography due on 2/25. Students will give a 20-minute presentation on their research during the last two class meetings, and the final draft of the paper is due on 4/15. The instructor will be available to consult about research topics and methods.

Academic Honor Policy:
It is expected that you will exhibit ethical behavior concerning your work in this class. Students are expected to do their own work, use their own words in papers, and to reference outside sources appropriately. Failure to uphold the standards of academic honesty will result in the appropriate disciplinary action.
As a result of completing the registration form at the University of Florida, every student has signed the following statement:
"I understand that the University of Florida expects its students to be honest in all their academic work. I agree to adhere to this commitment to academic honesty and understand that my failure to comply with this commitment may result in disciplinary action up to and including expulsion from the University."
We, the members of the University of Florida community, pledge to hold ourselves and our peers to the highest standards of honesty and integrity.
Furthermore, on work submitted for credit by UF students, the following pledge is either required or implied:

"On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid in doing this assignment."

Students Requesting Accommodations due to Disabilities:
Students with disabilities who experience learning barriers and would like to request academic accommodations should connect with the disability Resource Center. Click here to get started with the Disability Resource Center. It is important for students to share their accommodation letter with their instructor and discuss their access needs, as early as possible in the semester.

Online class meetings and privacy:

Our class sessions may be audio visually recorded for students in the class to refer back and for enrolled students who are unable to attend live. Students who participate with their camera engaged or utilize a profile image are agreeing to have their video or image recorded. If you are unwilling to consent to have your profile or video image recorded, be sure to keep your camera off and do not use a profile image. Likewise, students who un-mute during class and participate orally are agreeing to have their voices recorded. If you are not willing to consent to have your voice recorded during class, you will need to keep your mute button activated and communicate exclusively using the "chat" feature, which allows students to type questions and comments live. The chat will not be recorded or shared. As in all courses, unauthorized recording and unauthorized sharing of recorded materials is prohibited.

Course Evaluations

Students are expected to provide professional and respectful feedback on the quality of instruction in this course by completing course evaluations online via GatorEvals. Click here for guidance on how to give feedback in a professional and respectful manner. Students will be notified when the evaluation period opens, and can complete evaluations through the email they receive from GatorEvals, in their Canvas course menu under GatorEvals, or via ufl.bluera.com/ufl/. Summaries of course evaluation results are available to students here.
