

CREATING HEALTHY COMMUNITIES

ARTS + PUBLIC HEALTH IN AMERICA

ADVANCING CROSS-SECTOR COLLABORATION AT THE INTERSECTIONS OF THE ARTS AND PUBLIC HEALTH TO CREATE HEALTHIER COMMUNITIES.

COLLABORATION

SHARING KNOWLEDGE, PRACTICE, AND WAYS OF KNOWING

Over 300 thought leaders from the arts & culture, public health, and community development sectors convened in working groups across the country to explore current practices, priorities, evidence and policy changes needed to enable community-based practice at the intersections of the arts and public health.

TRANSLATION

TRANSLATING KNOWLEDGE AND RESEARCH INTO POLICY AND PRACTICE

The knowledge and evidence gathered was translated into an array of resources designed to advance innovation, practice and policy at the intersections of the arts, community development, and public health.

DISCOVERY

RESEARCH AND EVIDENCE SYNTHESIS

The initiative undertook a multifaceted research strategy - including surveys, focus groups, scoping and systematic reviews - to map, evaluate, and consolidate existing evidence, and to document and describe how the arts are used in public health in the US.

DISSEMINATION

SHARING RESOURCES AND ENABLING EVIDENCE-BASED PRACTICE AND ACTION

Robust and comprehensive communications and publication strategies have made the initiative's resources widely available to practitioners, educators, researchers and policy makers to advance the field of arts in public health.
